

Beacon Wins the Thames Valley Business Magazine “Small Business of the Year” Award 2007

The team at Beacon are very pleased to announce that last week we won First Prize for the prestigious award “Small Business of the Year!”

The award is given to the Thames Valley business that in the judges’ opinion has shown the most outstanding recent success and potential for the future, so it’s a great achievement for us which tops off a really exciting year.

Beacon was among 35 other up and coming Thames Valley businesses that entered from Oxon. Bucks. Berks. North Hants. and Surrey and was picked from a shortlist of 6 companies.

The awards ceremony was hosted by Alastair Campbell, Tony Blair’s former communications chief and popular media commentator on 22nd November at the Royal Berkshire Conference Centre at the Madejski Stadium, Reading.

In accepting the award, Jeremy said “In 12 months we’ve re-branded, made our first acquisition, become ISO9001 accredited and seen a 40% increase in turnover. We wouldn’t be in this position without our great clients, great suppliers but most importantly a really great team. Rapid growth doesn’t come without its issues and our team has responded really well at all levels under extreme pressure. The award is testament to their great efforts and will hopefully provide us with a springboard to catapult us into other categories next year. It will also help to raise our profile in the Thames Valley where we are always seeking new opportunities.”
